SIR ZELMAN COWEN UNIVERSITIES FUND PRIZE FOR DISCOVERY IN MEDICAL RESEARCH

Awarded in alternate years at the University of Sydney and at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, the prize recognises discovery in medical research by a researcher under 45 years of age who has made a major contribution to the understanding or treatment of disease. The inaugural award was made in Sydney, in 2006.

The trustees of the fund are pleased to announce the award of the Prize for 2010 to:

DR RACHEL CODD

School Of Medical Sciences, University Of Sydney.

Dr Codd was nominated for the development of a range of compounds that may be effective in treating iron overload disease.

Each year, about 300,000 to 500,000 babies are born with severe blood disorders, including sickle-cell anaemia and the thalassemias. To prevent life-threatening anaemia, patients with beta-thalassemia undergo blood transfusions every 2-4 weeks. Regular blood transfusions cause an excess of iron to accumulate in the body (iron overload disease) and since humans do not have an active iron excreting mechanism, patients must undergo additional treatment to remove the iron (chelation therapy). The current treatment for iron overload disease is effective only when administered by intravenous infusion. To improve the quality of life of thalassemia patients, there is a need to develop iron chelation agents that are orally active.

Dr Codd has discovered that simple modifications to the currently available iron chelation therapy produce new compounds which retain the favourable iron-binding properties yet have new properties that indicate potential for improving treatment options for thalassemia. In addition, the compounds may have application in neurodegenerative diseases such as Parkinson's disease, in which irregular iron levels have been implicated as contributing factors.

The 2010 award of the Sir Zelman Cowen Universities Fund Prize for Discovery in Medical Research is sponsored by The Schwartz Foundation.

PARIS: REVOLUTIONARY CITY

JUNE 26-JULY 10, 2010 ♦ $4,495 per person twin share, land content only

Indulge yourself in this 15-day journey to Paris and surrounding towns. The tour is designed for travellers wanting an experience of Paris that goes beyond a superficial treatment of the tourist hot-spots and for those with a strong interest in French history. Daytime walks, museum and site visits will explore both well-known sites and places not visited by regular tour groups. Background talks by our expert tour leader will enhance your knowledge and increase your enjoyment. Accommodation is in a comfortable apartment-style hotel in Bercy Village, centrally located in the 12th arrondissement. Apart from the scheduled program, there will be time to relax, visit local markets, enjoy cafes and soak up the unique atmosphere of this most beautiful of cities.

SOME HIGHLIGHTS

- Walking tours of key sites of the Revolution, such as Les Invalides, the Bastille and the Palais-Royale
- Day-trips to Versailles, Fontainebleau and Vaux-le-Vicomte to survey the architecture of aristocratic power
- Visits to key history and art museums, as well as former private residences
- A retracing of Louis XVI and Marie-Antoinette's 'Flight to Varennes' in 1791
- A day trip to Rouen, a fine example of the Revolution's idea of a provincial centre.

Tour leader Dr Michael Adcock is a social and cultural historian who specialises in the field of modern France. Michael's teaching experience includes several years with History Department of the University of Melbourne and a series of popular lectures at the National Gallery of Australia in Canberra, the Art Gallery of Queensland and the National Gallery of Victoria. Michael has previously led three highly successful tours to Paris for Academy Travel.
